MISE-EN-SCÈNE

The term mise-en-scène, directly translated to mean ‘setting the stage’ is commonly used to refer to set design and arrangement of actors in scenes for a theatre or film production. Mise-en-scène has, in film criticism, been called the “grand undefined term” (Timothy Corrigan, 2015). It has been criticised for its focus on theatrical or dramatic design aspects rather than the plot itself, as those who utilise Mise-en-scène tend to look at what is “put before the camera” (Brian Henderson, 1976) rather than the story.

This exhibition explores how we interpret and are affected by our everyday environments. Through the eyes and multimedia applications of the featured Artists, the ‘metteur en toile’ (one who puts on the canvas), taking the place of the Directors, the ‘matteur en scène’ (one who puts on the stage), we look at how we perceive our surroundings, whether that is our home, the beach, our favourite place to go for a walk or with friends. Our environments.

Central themes the artists in Mise-en-scène address within their work compose the five core elements of presentation (composition, sets, props, characters, costumes, and lighting) with memory, time, nostalgia, personal history and emotional value.

These themes address the perceived shortcomings around ‘plot’ in the mise-en-scène of theatre and film. Considering the idea of mise-en-scène from an artist’s perspective, the artworks weave personal narrative, or ‘plot’, through the snapshot scenes. The art demonstrating the artists’ emotional and autobiographical responses to their surroundings, imbuing storytelling through composition.

The 12-month exhibition is divided into two acts. In the second act, the artists will explore the impact of time, experience and emotion on mis-en-scène and the story of place, replacing and reevaluating the mise-en-scène of their artwork’s chosen scenes. Throughout the show however, Mise-en-scène offers an opportunity to ask an age-old question, are we a product of our environment? And how does our real-life ‘set’ impact our sense of self?
