Olivia Mansfield's paintings display figments of fantastical imaginary worlds. They serve as portals to strange distant realms which allude to and echo our own existence. Ethereal visions approach you with an unravelling narrative, bringing forth splayed and mystical perceptions of a familiar yet altogether fictional place or dwelling.

The intuitive nature of Mansfield's process allows her to engage deeply with the forms which manifest organically in the work. Bodies and beasts, altars, symbols and sacred spaces, caverns, caves, mountains and sigils all exist quietly waiting to emerge from within the delicate and distinct manipulation of the paint.

My influences have roots in classical and historical painting, iconography, theology, culture, religion, ritual and symbolism. These themes converge where time is lapsed and distorted, enabling the landscape and its inhabitants to manifest and nurture an interesting discourse that encompass theory, fact, science, and fiction – altogether linked with the apocalyptic force of nature itself.

Themes of myth, legend and folklore intertwine vividly with celestial and almost astrological imagery. A reference to melting, oozing landmasses and formations both guides and lures the viewer to recognise or to believe that life, creation, humanity, death and destruction have occurred. Highlighting our ever-changing landscape and touching upon the notion of a kind of Sublime chaos, which climaxes on the undeniable beauty in disruption and ruination.

More recently my practice has begun to shift into exploring a more figurative and bodily image. These beings move within the abstract structures of the gestural and emotive landscapes, looking to illuminate a symbiotic existence with the natural world.
