Sam's practice explores embodied subjectivity in the digital age. He is interested in the contradictions of contemporary experience, in particular the dispersion of our identities between physical and digital realms.

His painting combines chiaroscuro techniques inspired by the Old Masters with airbrush fades and shifts of light, traversing the boundary between the authentic and the simulated.

King's pieces act as a proxy for his own experience: flicking between temporal rhythms of attention and distraction, desires for genuine connection or personal agency, and the systemisation of human life within capitalist and consumerist systems.
